OFSTED are now looking for schools to show that they are engaging with the Global Learning Programme (GLP)

In their School Inspection Update of December 2015 (Issue 5)¹, OFSTED draw attention to the Global Learning Programme (GLP) as it 'maps onto the four Ofsted core judgements and to SMSC'. It is not up to the inspectors to ask if the school uses the programme, but schools can and should highlight how the GLP is contributing to their provision and outcomes for pupils.

What is the Global learning programme (GLP)?

<https://globaldimension.org.uk/glp>

The GLP is a programme funded by the Department for International Development (DFID) which acknowledges that 'Every child growing up in the UK should have the chance to learn about the world around them, the facts of poverty and underdevelopment, and about the potential to build a freer and more prosperous world.' The GLP works with primary, secondary and special schools across the UK to support teachers and ensure pupils develop the skills needed to work in a global economy through learning about key themes of development education such as: knowledge of developing countries, their economies, histories and human geography, knowledge of the basic elements of globalisation, knowledge of different ways to achieve global poverty reduction and the arguments around the merits of different approaches. GLP is co-ordinated by Pearson UK, SSAT, The Institute of Education, The Royal Geographical Association, Think Global, Geographical Association & Oxfam.

The GLP aspires to engage a minimum of 50% of English schools so why not show your passion for global learning and get on board?
